the People's Cafe Open Mic every Thursday with free coffee from Wobbly Cup Roasters. There's also Oly Prison Letter Writing first Sundays of every month. Mutual Aid Self/Social Therapy every other Tuesday. Pretty sure that's all the regulars but we're always open to more!

Q. What kind of events would you like to see happen more?

We try to help when we can but in the face of this administration it would be great to see regular donation events for bail funds and more skill-shares around tactics and legal rights, as well as support for local groups doing the real work (s/o La Resistencia, FREE LELO). We also love and respect the other great spaces in town (check out Decay!), would love to do more collaborative events, especially with other worker co-ops in Olympia.

Q. What advice do you have for a group interested in starting a similar space in their town?

As best as you can stay true to the core values of liberation, solidarity, and mutual aid; things will go wrong, bad actors will try to twist things their way, landlords will suck, cops/fascists will harrass you. The real ones will shake out, Another World is Possible.

Q. How can people hear about events at the Mortuary?

Best way is Sabotage Noise of course! Otherwise look for a flyer around town or floating around the internet. Every event is promoted by the folks who book it, so it's all over. We're working on a text-blast that will give a run down for the month though, we'll send you the sign up link once we get rid of using Google forms haha

Sabotage Noise distributes thousands of copies.

Every month, always free!!

THE MORTUARY

Q&A With a DIY Space

"The Mortuary" is a DIY music and community space in Olympia whose listings you can find on the calendar inside. Sabotage Noise presents a short Q&A.

Q. Where does the name 'Mortuary' come from?

The building we occupy was originally built by the colonial ass sheriff, completed in 1906, as a mortuary. Most recently it was run by Mills & Mills Funeral Home until they moved locations. Since then it's been a lot of things: 24/7 Jesus call center, old school game store, and now DIY social center. Many lives, many ghosts, much lore.

Q. What is up and coming in the Olympia music scene right now?

Still a lot of good local bands despite it feeling like kind of a lull for some folks. Seems like Crust is alive and well again! We're looking to bring more out of town acts through since it's a good midway point between Portland and Seattle.

Q. What are some of the radical events you host regularly?

There's so many coming from community members now! Collective members started
